Pentagon Must Fight In Senate To Regain Defense Funds

REGARDLESS of much talk earlier in the year that Congress would boost defense spending, the facts of the case are that the Pentagon will be forced to fight hard in the Senate to reverse cuts imposed by the House Appropriations Committee.

As THE JOURNAL went to press, the House was preparing to take a final vote on the fiscal '60 Armed Forces budget. Its Appropriations Committee recommended $39.8 billion, which is $339.8 million less than proposed in January by President Eisenhower.

Each of the Services is involved in major budget controversies, notably relating to Army and Marine Corps strengths, Air Force missile programs, and the fate of a Navy supercarrier.

The House Committee, in reporting the top money bill for the year starting 1 July:

- Chopped $538.6 million from the Air Force.
- Knocked $86.6 million from Navy requests.
- Gave the Army $222 million extra.
- Approved the Marine Corps budget pretty much as requested.

Here are some of the highlights of the Committee's action, as reported in greater detail on inside pages:

MARINE CORPS wins own operations and maintenance funds (page 3), urged to take new look at possibility of retaining 27 battalion landing teams with smaller force (page 28).

"Howitzer" Salute To The Army Secretary

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF Gerald P. Stadler, left, and Cadet Captain and Brigade Commander Peter Dawkins, visited the Pentagon last week to present a copy of the "Howitzer" year book to Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker. Both cadets were commissioned second lieutenants in graduation ceremonies at West Point on 3 June.

Secretary Douglas Tells USAFA '59 Lts. They Must Learn About Other Services

U. S. AIR FORCE ACADEMY
COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.

(Seventy-Two Weddings Set, P. 19)

SECRETARY of the Air Force James H. Douglas took the occasion of the first graduation address at the USAF Academy to tell 207 new lieutenants that "your relationships with the Army and Navy will be much closer than those in the past."

Hailing the brilliant achievements of the Academy, Secretary Douglas declared: "You and I will always take pride in the Air Force. You are officers of the Air Force; but even more important, you are officers of the United States."

Stressing the need to be informed on Army and Navy operations, Secretary Douglas advised the USAFA '59 graduates that "most of our operational forces are unified commands; there are few single-service operations."

He noted that "much of your careers may be spent on staffs which comprise not only our three Services, but the Services of our allies as well—and in posts where association with the Services and with our allies is close and constant."

Speaking to the U. S. Naval Academy graduating class, Secretary of the Navy, designate William B. Franke took a similar tack, declaring:

"Your problem will be to find the proper balance between competition and cooperation—between advocacy and loyalty. You must learn as a junior officer to compete with other junior officers of your ship or unit—but always within the framework of loyalty to your ship and its commanding officer."

"Later, as you move to the policymaking levels of your Services, you must find a way to advance the policies of your Service and at the same time to subordinate this aggressive spirit to inter-Service cooperation when necessary for the good of your country."

Plaque Honors First USAFA Superintendent

A 100-YEAR Honor Roll Plaque, donated in memory of the late Lt. Gen. Hubert R. Harmon, first Superintendent of the U. S. Air Force Academy, was unveiled 31 May in ceremonies at Colorado Springs. The event was a part of June Week activities climaxed 3 June with the graduation of the first class. Left to right are Maj. Gen. James E. Briggs, Superintendent; Mrs. Hubert R. Harmon of San Antonio; Cadet Bradley C. Hosmer of Dunseith, North Dakota, top ranking graduate of the Class of 1959 whose name is the first to be inscribed on the plaque; and Maj. Gen. John H. McCormick, USAF-Ret., Vice-President of the Kelly Field National Bank of San Antonio, the organization which donated the plaque.

Each year for the next 100 years, the name of the top-ranking graduating cadet will be placed on the plaque, which hangs in Harmon Hall, the Academy Administration Building.

Cadet Hosmer, son of Col. and Mrs. Clark L. Hosmer, Lackland AFB, Tex., will enter graduate study at Exeter College, Oxford, England, as the Academy's first Rhodes Scholar.

General Harmon was Superintendent of the Academy from 1954 until his retirement in 1956. He died 22 February 1957. He rests in the Academy cemetery, the first person to be buried there.

Capt. Wilkinson, Pioneer Atomic Skipper, Takes Helm Of First Nuclear Cruiser

Capt. Eugene P. Wilkinson, who was first commander of the first atomic-powered submarine, Nautilus, has been named to take the helm of the Navy's first nuclear-propelled surface ship, the guided missile cruiser, Long Beach (CG(N)-9).

Keel for the Long Beach was laid 2 December 1957 at the Fore River Shipyard of the Bethlehem Steel Co., Quincy, Mass. The 721-foot ship is scheduled for completion early in 1961.

Captain Wilkinson will be relieved of command of Submarine Squadron 102 by Cdr. James F. Calvert in September. Commander Calvert has commanded the a-powered submarine Skate since she was commissioned in December 1957.

The Captain first served aboard a cruiser, the Louisville, at the outbreak of WWII. He was assigned to the ship's engineering department.

The Long Beach is scheduled for launching late this month. Captain Wilkinson reports as her PCO 1 October.

The cruiser is one of three atomic powered surface ships being built for the Navy. The others are the aircraft carrier Enterprise and the frigate Bainbridge.

Air Force PCS Moves Are Hit Anew; $2 Million Sliced From '60 Program

PERMANENT changes of station in the Air Force—already slated to be cut back 7,000 in fiscal '60—will undergo a further reduction if Congress upholds action taken by the House Appropriations Committee.

The Committee sliced $2 million from the Air Force PCS program, urging "further improvement."

Last year, the Committee criticized all of the Services for too-frequent PCS moves and directed a careful review of the permanent change of station program.

In considering the Air Force program for 1960 in this area, the Committee noted "some progress has been made in that 7,000 fewer moves have been programmed than in 1959," but Air Force costs have gone up $2 million, regardless.

The Committee said it "feels that further improvement is warranted in this area and accordingly has assessed a reduction of $2,000,000."

Similar action was not taken against the other three Services.

Maj. Stendor Commands Marine Cadet Program

Maj. Bernard J. Stendor, S-1 for Marine Training Squadron One, MCAS Cherry Point, N. C., will command the new Marine Aviation Cadet program this Summer at NAS Pensacola, Fla.

Under the new plan, MarCads will train separately from Naval Aviation Cadets and will be outfitted with officer-style Marine uniforms.

The first 11 Marine Cadets are slated to begin their pre-flight training in July. Headquarters estimates that by the end of the year, more than 300 Leatherneck trainees will be enrolled.

The MarCad Commander, a veteran of 17 years in Marine Aviation, won his wings at Pensacola in 1942. Major Stendor flew during WWII with the 4th MAF at Guam, Iwo Jima, Okinawa and the Philippines. During the Korean War, he flew with VMR-152 as a transport pilot.

RAdm. Gannon Will Lead Taiwan Patrol Force

RAdm. John W. Gannon, Assistant Chief of Naval Operations (Fleet Operations), has been named to succeed RAdm. Paul P. Blackburn, Jr., Commander, United States Taiwan Patrol Force and Commander, Fleet Air Wing One, this month.

RAdm. Marshall E. Dornin, Assistant Chief of Naval Personnel for Plans relieves RAdm. Benedict J. Semmes, Jr., Commander, Destroyer Flotilla Three, in September.

New assignments for Admirals Gannon and Semmes have not been made by the Navy.

Capt. Sawyer Tops Class; USMA Duty For No. 3 Man

Army Signal School at Ft. Monmouth, N. J., last week graduated its advanced class, with Capt. Kenneth A. Sawyer, who was commissioned in 1950 following graduation from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology with a BS degree in physics, honor man. He also holds a MS degree in meteorology from New York University.

He will be assigned to Korea.

Number two man in class was Capt. Charles D. Ford, Jr.; a graduate of Virginia Polytechnical Institute. He will take further training at the Signal School and in the fall attend the University of Arizona.

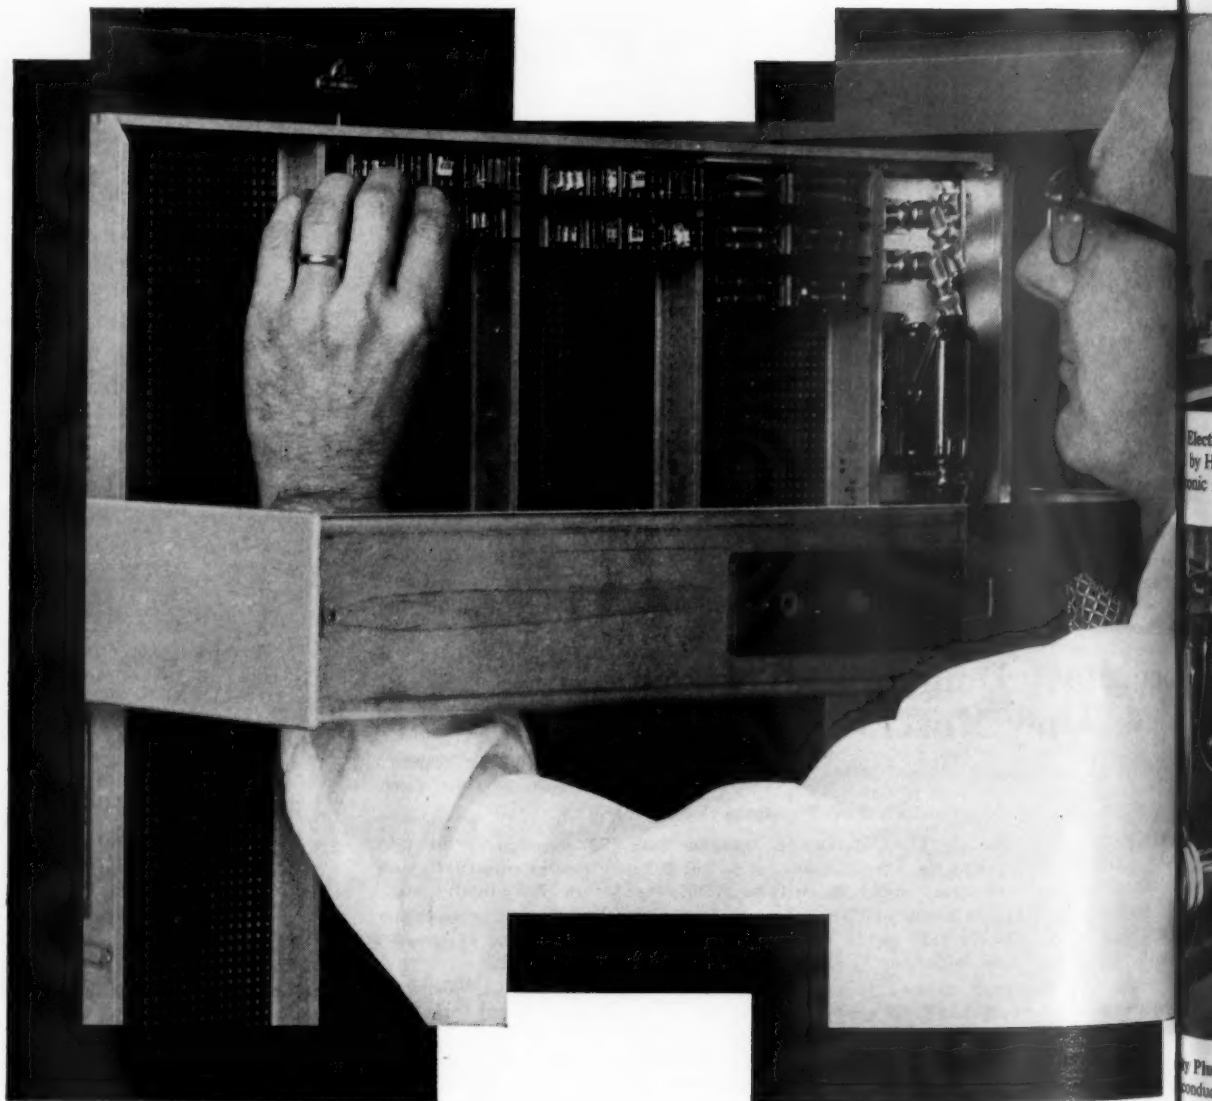

Capt. George R. Fullerton, USMA '50, was third in the class. He also holds an MS degree from Stanford University. He will be assigned to the USMA staff and faculty.

Former Regular Marine Is Colonel In Reserve

Richard T. McNown, 704 Genter St., La Jolla, Calif., has been promoted to colonel in the Marine Corps Reserve.

He has resided in La Jolla with his wife, Hope, daughter Eleanor, 17, and son Robert, 14, since he resigned his commission in the regular Marine Corps in 1947. At that time he held the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Marines Win Fight For Own Bank Account; Receive Funds To Buy New Small Arms

A DEFENSE Department move to shift $171.3 million of Marine Corps funds into a catch-all Navy bank account has been stopped cold by the House Appropriations Committee.

Ignoring Pentagon advice to lump Navy and Marine Corps operation and maintenance funds into a single cash drawer, the Committee established a separate O&M account for the Marines, noting that the funds are to be set aside specifically for Marine Corps troops and facilities.

Marine procurement funds approved by the Committee total $133.8 million and will provide the first year's portion of a four-year program to phase the new family of 7.62 mm infantry small arms weapons into the Corps.

Additionally, Marine Corps fire power will be improved by the procurement of the Hawk, Red-Eye and Terrier surface-to-air missile systems and the Lacrosse surface-to-surface missile system.

Army C/S Backed By Committee In Plea For "Horizontal" Plans; Joint Chiefs Hit

General Maxwell D. Taylor, retiring Army Chief of Staff, has won the powerful support of the House Appropriations Committee in his plea for a "horizontal look" at Defense planning.

He told the Committee earlier this year (THE JOURNAL, 4 April), that U. S. military weakness stems from a failure to determine standards of sufficiency in all of the categories "to which several Services contribute."

General Taylor said defense requirements are appraised vertically, "but we do not look across horizontally at the contributions made by the other Services to the same functions." These functions, he said, should be matched "with the forces available in all three Services."

The Appropriations Committee, agreeing with General Taylor, has told the Joint Chiefs of Staff they "should look at what is available for what purposes and attempt to match it with the needs."

As an example, the Committee said, the JCS "should take a look at the combined forces of the Marine Corps and the Army. It is not a question of combining the Army and Marine Corps. It is merely a question of looking at the combined strength and the combined capability of these two great forces in making the final determination as to what our ground force should be in providing for our commitments throughout the world."

Combined Air Power

The Joint Chiefs also "should take a similar look at the combined air power capabilities of the Air Force and Navy," the Committee said. "Such an approach should be the function of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in connection with preparation of plans for the 1961 budget request."

The Committee charged that "there is something wrong in our present military planning. It seems quite apparent that in this regard the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as a corporate body, is not providing the kind of advice and leadership which this country requires."

The fault does not lie with the individual JCS members, who "are able and experienced military men," the Committee said, but "with the organization and system of operations."

Expect More From JCS

Quoting from General Taylor's testimony on the need to determine standards of sufficiency, the Committee said "This is a most serious indictment of the inner workings of our military organization. It makes it easier to understand why there is so much confusion and duplication with resultant waste in the military establishment."

The Committee said "The President, the Secretary of Defense, the Congress and the American people have a right to expect a better job from the Joint Chiefs of Staff in the way of military guidance."

"As a corporate body, the Joint Chiefs of Staff must set up plans for the guidance of the various commands and the respective services. Hard decisions are required, and the President and the Secretary of Defense and the Joint Chiefs must assume the major responsibility for tailoring military forces to requirements."

General Taylor had told the Committee that establishment of a "horizontal" budget program would have to be "phased." He said it would not be "easy and it would call for many administrative and budgetary changes."

USAF FUND CUT BY $2 MILLION

Criticism of the U. S. Air Force Academy building program has resulted in a $2 million funds-cut.

The House Appropriations Committee set a $16 million limitation on the amount of operation and maintenance funds which the Air Force can spend at the Academy during the coming fiscal year.

O&M costs at the Academy in fiscal '59 were $18.2 million. The Air Force had asked for $18.01 million for fiscal '60.

In voting the $16 million limitation, the Committee said it is not satisfied with answers the Air Force has provided to charges made by the General Accounting Office that the Academy has misused O&M money.

$88.8 Million Medicare Program Wins Committee Approval; DoD Continues Study

The Armed Forces family Medicare program escaped unscathed—and, in fact, garnered a commendation—as the House Appropriations Committee chopped, hacked and pruned other military spending programs for the coming fiscal year.

The Committee approved the full $88,847,000 Medicare program recommended by the Pentagon.

The Department of Defense and the Office of Dependents Medical Care were praised by the Committee for their handling of the program during fiscal '59.

Last year, Congress threatened to emasculate the Medi-Care Act, charging that military hospitals were not being used to their maximum capacity because too many family members were seeking out civilian physicians and medical facilities. The Pentagon promised to restrict the use of civilian facilities to those for whom military facilities are not available.

This action, the Committee said, has resulted in an "estimated increase of 11.6% in the use of military facilities for dependent medical care."

The Committee noted, however, that "there are two basic factors operating against any substantial reductions in this program at the present time. There has been a steady increase in costs of civilian medical care, while at the same time there has been a rapid increase in the military dependent population."

The fiscal '60 Medicare spending program of $88.8 million is, however, nearly $5 million less than was spent on the program during the current fiscal year. The reduction was brought about by changes in the Medi-Care program which were placed into effect last October.

The Committee said it understands the Defense Department is continuing to study the "entire military medical problem," and expressed the hope "that steps can ultimately be taken which may further reduce the costs of the dependents medical care program without depriving the dependents of the benefits which the Congress wishes them to have."

The Committee said Congress desires that military families "have the benefit of prompt and adequate medical treatment at all times wherever they may be."

BERLIN SHIFT

Lt. Col. Joseph F. Kasun is the new Chief of Berlin Command's G-4 Division, replacing Lt. Col. Henry Mastro, assigned to the Yuma Test Center, Ariz.

Defense Weapon

The telephone is a defense weapon—and an important one.

A manufacturer of rockets, for example, needs data or delivery on a specific part. He picks up his telephone, makes several Long Distance calls, and his problem is solved.

An unidentified aircraft is detected in flight by a radar installation. The information is relayed automatically and instantly over telephone cables to a defense center.

It is then flashed over the network of special Bell System telephone lines which link the country's entire system of continental defense.

The role of the Bell System does not stop there or with the thousands upon thousands of calls that are a part of the manufacture of countless items of defense.

Its Bell Telephone Laboratories are engaged in many important research and development projects for the government. These include the Nike Zeus anti-missile missile system and the guidance system for the Titan intercontinental ballistic missile.

Western Electric, the Bell System's manufacturing and supply unit, is producing the guidance and control equipment which is the heart and brains of the mighty Nike Ajax and Nike Hercules missile systems.

The Sandia Corporation, a subsidiary of Western Electric, continues to manage the Atomic Energy Commission's Sandia Laboratory, which develops, designs and tests atomic weapons.

Among many other Western Electric defense projects were the 3000-mile Distant Early Warning (DEW) Line in the Arctic and the "White Alice" communication system linking population centers and military installations in Alaska. Both were completed on schedule and turned over to the Air Force.

Another project for the Air Force was the design, production and supervision of installation of a communications system for a guided missile test range extending out to sea.

The backbone of this system is the special undersea cable that stretches 1370 nautical miles from Cape Canaveral in Florida to Puerto Rico. It provides an instant, secret, weather-proof means of transmitting data on missiles in flight.

Radar installations along the way spot the missile's flight position which is flashed continuously to the testing base by cable. So are signals from the missile itself.

Recently the U.S. Air Force asked us to add the communications phases of a ballistic missile early warning system to the other military projects handled by the Bell System.

The Bell System is primarily engaged in providing telephone service. But it gives top priority and its utmost effort to the needs of Government whenever it is called upon for work for which it is specially fitted by size and experience.

Particularly when it comes to protecting the country, it's good to use the best scientific knowledge available in the communications field.

Polaris Program Pays Off; Congress May Vote Another Speed-Up Next Year

"Everything possible" should be done to bring about the successful development of the Lockheed Polaris fleet ballistic missile "at the earliest possible date," the House Appropriations Committee has declared.

Approving funds for advance procurement of long lead-time items of three additional Polaris submarines, the Committee said it may take steps to accelerate the program again next year.

In the fiscal '59 budget, the Committee added funds for an additional four Polaris FBM submarines, increasing the authorized number from five to nine.

The Administration released funds for construction of only one of the additional Polaris subs, and is holding the remaining money in reserve for release early in fiscal '60.

"Even though the Administration has not permitted this program to move forward as fast as provided for last year, the Committee action, supported by the Congress, has nevertheless paid off," the Committee said, and development of the system "appears to be moving ahead at a gratifying pace."

With continued success, "by next year progress should be such that it may be possible and reasonable again to accelerate this program," the Committee said.

The report added that the system "because of its basic mobility and the expected capability of launching weapons while concealed beneath the surface of the seas, holds great promise being one of the most effective deterrent weapons systems yet conceived."

Committee Tells Why It Killed $260 Million Fiscal '60 Super-Carrier

THE Navy's $260 million super-carrier was knocked out of the fiscal '60 military budget by the House Appropriations Committee, which justified the controversial decision as follows:

"In determining what action to take on this request the Committee concerned itself not with the question of whether we need attack carriers in the defense forces but rather with the question of how many of these carriers we need and whether or not the carrier force in being plus the three now under construction is adequate for the present.

"The total active carrier force at present is 23 vessels, of which 14 are attack carriers and the remainder are anti-submarine warfare carriers. There are three attack carriers now under construction which will serve to either augment the fleet, or replace older attack carriers.

"Testimony indicated that, even during the recent Lebanon and Taiwan crises there were but seven or eight attack carriers on station overseas or en route. In non-crisis periods, there are four to five such vessels on station.

"Under these circumstances, and in the light of the lag in the more essential anti-submarine warfare mission, the Committee has eliminated funds for the proposed carrier and recommends appropriations above the budget estimates for the anti-submarine mission."

The Committee said it "strongly approves" the Navy's fleet rehabilitation and modernization program, and recommended the full amount requested for this program.

A total of 19 new ships were approved for construction and 13 others were approved for conversion.

VAdm. Combs Heads Combined Command

VAdm. Thomas S. Combs, Eastern Sea Frontier Commander, assumes additional duty as Third Naval District Commandant, 1 July, when RAdm. Chester C. Wood ends his career.

The recommendation that the functions of these two commands be combined was made by Secretary of the Navy William B. Franke, who headed a board on Reorganization of the Navy. At the time he made this proposal, he was Under Secretary of the Navy.

Secretary Franke's recommendation combine the duties of Commander, Eastern Sea Frontier and Commandant 12th Naval District has not yet been acted upon.

In addition to becoming Third District Commandant, Admiral Combs donned a third hat as Commander, Naval Base New York.

Pentagon Asks Hill For Swift Approval To Create Bureau Of Naval Weapons

The Defense Department wants Congress to authorize creation of a Bureau of Naval Weapons and abolish the Bureau of Aeronautics and Ordnance by 1 January 1960.

Creation of the new Bureau was recommended by William B. Franke, who headed a Special Board on Reorganization of the Navy prior to assuming duty as Navy Secretary 1 June. Former Navy Secretary Thomas S. Gates, jr., who endorsed this part of the Franke report, has since moved up to become Deputy Secretary of Defense.

A Defense Department communication, under signature of Mr. Gates who is Acting Defense Secretary while Secretary

McElroy is in Geneva, explains that "prior to the development of supersonic aircraft and guided missiles, and the concurrent technical advances in electronics and similar fields, aircraft and weapons could be designed, developed, and produced by the Bureau of Aeronautics and the Bureau of Ordnance, respectively, with only a minimum of coordination between the two bureaus.

"Aircraft and weapons, and controlling and launching equipment, have now, however, become so complex and interrelated that they must be designed and developed as complete systems. As a result, the weapons systems development functions of the Bureau of Aeronautics and the Bureau of Ordnance have become so intermingled as to produce increasingly serious problems of divided responsibility and cognizance, coordination at multiple stages and levels, and funding."

The advantage of consolidation, DoD said, "would place the weapons system development effort of the Department of the Navy under the direct authority and control of a single executive; would simplify the funding of major weapons systems; would insure full utilization of the professional and technical talent available to the Navy; and would permit more efficient use of facilities and laboratories. The result would be a significant improvement in the total weapons systems development effort of the Department."

Although the new organization will be large and its responsibilities "exceptionally heavy," DoD said "its size will not make it unwieldy."

Budget Highlights

Here are some highlights of the House Appropriations Committee action on the fiscal '60 military budget:

MATS FUNDS—Continued provision that $80 million shall be available only for procurement of commercial air transportation. The Committee expressed concern "that the use of call contracts is not proving sufficiently economical and urges that firm price contracts be obtained for commercial service."

LEGISLATIVE ACTIVITIES—Funds for legislative-liaison activities within OSD and the three Services are limited to $2.9 million.

PUBLIC AFFAIRS—Funds for Assistant Secretary of Defense Murray Snyder's office are lumped together with other OSD funds at the Pentagon's request, but the Committee will continue to watch the activities of this office and "Should there be any evidence of substantial expansion the Committee may again provide a separate appropriation."

CONSULTANT FEES—Consultants and specialists brought to the Pentagon for special jobs can be paid $56.56 per day in the future instead of the present $50 daily rate.

AUTOMOBILES—SecDef is directed to make a detailed study of the number of automobiles needed by the Services, in an effort to eliminate 5% of the sedans and station wagons now in use.

M/G Bogart AF Supply Director

Maj. Gen. F. A. Bogart, Director of Plans and Programs at Air Materiel Command Headquarters, will become Director of Supply 1 July, General S. E. Anderson, AMC Commander, has announced at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

General Bogart will replace Maj. Gen. F. J. Dau, who retires 30 June.

Simultaneously, Maj. Gen. W. A. Davis, Deputy for Production in AMC's Directorate of Procurement and Production, will become Director of Plans and Programs. He was nominated 22 May for temporary rank of major general.

General Bogart, USMA '31, was Assistant CofS for the U. S. Military Mission to Moscow, in 1944-45.

An assignment with the Army Service Forces in 1945-46 was followed by an appointment as assistant chief of staff for logistics of Alaskan Command.

He became executive officer in the Directorate of Logistics at Air Force Headquarters in December, 1947.

On graduation from the National War College in 1950, General Bogart was appointed chief of the Supply Division in the Office of Military Assistance, Office of the Secretary of Defense. He was stationed at Paris, at Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers in Europe, from 1951-54, where his positions included being chief of the Plans and Programs Branch of SHAPE. He became Deputy Director of Budget in March, 1954, and Director of the Budget in July, 1954. Four years later he became Director of Plans and Programs at Headquarters, Air Materiel Command.

Proficiency Flying Pay Cut $25 Million; More Pilots Face Loss Of Flying Status

The Armed Forces will have to speed up their planned cut-back in proficiency flying if Congress upholds House Appropriations Committee reductions in flight-pay funds.

The Committee hacked $25 million from the amount requested by the Defense Department for the fiscal '60 proficiency flying budget.

In making the reduction, the Committee said it was taking advantage of Defense Department claims that the Services will be able to save about $40 million annually under a new and more restrictive proficiency flying policy announced earlier this year (THE JOURNAL, 4 April).

The screening-out of pilots "who obviously have no future in flying" is not yet operating "at full effectiveness," the Committee said.

Commenting on the age problem, the Committee noted that the Air Force had more than 9,000 pilots 40 years of age or over on duty as of last December, and said the number "is expected to increase at a progressive rate and will represent a substantial part of the rated inventory within another two or three years."

With the growing complexities of aircraft and "a possible around the clock airborne alert," the Committee said "flying demands the utmost in physical stamina and mental concentration," and it is apparent that there will be "more and more pilots whose future in flying will not justify their continued retention on flying status."

The Committee approved continuation of the policy to pay flight pay to rated personnel who have held aeronautical ratings or designations for at least 20 years, without requiring actual flying.

Flying hours were already scheduled to drop about 300,000 in the Air Force, Navy, and Marine Corps during fiscal '60, and to rise about 200,000 in the Army.

During the current fiscal year, the Air Force expects to get in 7,484,892 flying hours, compared with 7,350,769 in fiscal '60. The Navy and Marines expect to complete about 3,522,168 hours this year and had planned 3,259,016 next year.

Army flying hours were expected to increase from 1,723,000 in fiscal '59 to 1,926,000 in fiscal '60.

Budget Leadership Is Lacking At Pentagon

The completion of action in the House of Representatives on the Armed Forces budget for the year starting 1 July, as reported extensively in this issue of THE JOURNAL, has been marked by controversy among the legislators. The wrangling is certain to carry over into the Senate action.

In our form of government, there will always be cause for dispute—and properly so—between the Executive and Legislative branches concerning the needs of National Defense. Likewise, the Services must always anticipate that there will be divergent views among the legislators concerning specific programs—for example, the need for more super-carriers.

But what has happened this year is that the Pentagon has aggravated this situation by failing to provide effective leadership in the presentation of fiscal requirements. As a consequence, inter-Service disputes have been allowed to flare on Capitol Hill, due in large part to the fact, as the testimony has demonstrated repeatedly, that the Defense Department has not resolved critical issues. An example is the Hercules-Bomarc situation, where Secretary McElroy's foolhardy "feet to the fire" statement was at odds with the judgment that both systems are essential.

If the Secretary of Defense has been less than successful in his budget presentations, certainly it must be remarked also that the testimony on the fiscal '60 budget has brought into sharp focus the diminished stature of the Service Secretaries.

Congress is aware of the fact that the Defense Reorganization of 1958 has made the Service Secretaries subordinate officials. In some cases, they are eliminated from the channels of communication to their own Services. Quite understandably, the Appropriations Committees have been forced to rely almost exclusively on the testimony of professional military men to obtain individual Service viewpoints.

THE JOURNAL takes the position that Congress must be provided with the professional assessments of professional military men in making budget decisions, but we believe that this testimony should be accompanied by forceful presentations and acceptance of responsibilities by civilian leaders.

Nobody wants effective civilian control more than military men. When civilian leaders elect to take a back seat in Congressional budget action, there are two inevitable results. One is inter-Service squabbling that leads to fiscal confusion. The other is the exposure of military men to the danger of involvement in the political arena.

What is needed is dynamic civilian leadership in budget action on the part of the Secretary of Defense, the Service Secretaries, and the Assistant Secretaries of Defense. If this leadership is not forthcoming, Congress will provide it on its own terms.

Congress Wants Information About Retired

The Department of Defense is under orders from the House Appropriations Committee to submit before hearings begin on the fiscal '61 budget a detailed list of senior retired officers—colonel/Navy captain and above—who are employed by defense contractors. We hope that the Pentagon, in response to this demand, sends to Congress something more than a mere list of names.

The Department should take this opportunity to state positively and emphatically the contributions that are being made to the defense effort by the participation of retired military men of all ranks on the Industry part of the Defense Team.

At the same time, the Pentagon is being accorded an opportunity, should it desire to take this advantage, to present to Congress the full story of how outmoded dual employment and dual compensation laws are denying the Government the services of hundreds of retired military people.

In past years, many Pentagon officials have demonstrated altogether too much of a defensive attitude in reporting post-retirement activities of career military people. This attitude needs to be changed, once and for all.

Congress has a right to know of the great contributions that are being made by retired officers of the Armed Forces in strengthening the defense effort by using their skills in defense industries. Certainly by their lengthy service to the Nation—often at great financial sacrifice to their families—military men have every right to pursue their own interests after retirement. When these interests are identical with the needs of the Nation for maximum strength, then this fact needs to be asserted on Capitol Hill.

The McNeils: A Family Dedicated To Service

The sympathy of every member of the Armed Forces goes out to the wife and five children, parents and brother of Cdr. Wilfred J. McNeil, Jr., USN, a former test pilot and DFC winner in Korea. He was killed last week when his jet crashed into the Mediterranean on a combat readiness carrier training flight.

Commander McNeil, 38, USNA '42, was motivated in his command of Squadron 66, normally based at Oceana, Va., by the same devotion to duty that has marked the careers of his father, Assistant Secretary of Defense McNeil, and his brother, Maj. Evan McNeil, a bomber pilot stationed at Limestone AFB, Me.

The McNeils are a family dedicated to the service of the Nation.

From the first days of Unification—and even before when he served as a Reserve rear admiral—Assistant Secretary McNeil has worked tirelessly, with complete disregard for his health and personal fortune, to strengthen the Nation's defenses. And so it was with his sons.

Commander McNeil could look with great pride on the brilliant records of service compiled by his father and brother. And they in turn, together with the Commander's wife, the former Patricia Reynolds, their children, and his mother will always know that, in the tradition of his family, he dedicated and gave his life to the Service of his country.

READERS' VIEWS

Hits Budget Bureau's Powers

I have just come from a hearing before a subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee, hearing testimony on H.R. 7325, amendments to the Reserve Officer Personnel Act (ROPA), and evidently intending also to review H.R. 5083, the original Department of Defense Bill for which H.R. 7325 seems to be the Bureau of the Budget alternative. I confess myself shocked by the revelations at that hearing of the degree to which the Department of Defense, and to a certain measure, the Congress itself, is flogged about by an agency, the Bureau of the Budget, which has no standing nor recognition in our Federal Constitution, but which nonetheless seems definitely top dog in our present Government.

In this instance, DoD sent to the Bureau of the Budget a Bill, H.R. 5083, which had the detailed approval of every one of the Service Departments plus that of DoD itself. Yet Budget seemingly omniscient as well as very nearly omnipotent, drastically revised the unanimous decisions of the Department presumably charged with our National Defense—and this, mind you, matters wholly unrelated to cost, budgets, appropriations, or any other fiscal matter, since there is admittedly a noticeable difference in cost between the two Bills.

It would appear that we have over the years increasingly and with accelerated rapidity substituted a non-Constitutional agency, the Budget Bureau for most of the decisive functions of our Constitutional Govt. Department. We even seem to be approaching the point where those Departments, plus the Congress itself, would appear to be needless functions, if an all-wise Budget Bureau can perform all their duties.

Perhaps, before we slide completely into the abyss of a bureaucratic dictatorship, which we are certainly approaching at a frightening rate, we might plead with our Congress to assess some of its failing powers while it still has them, and clip the wings of the bureaucratic vulture before it gobbles them, as well as the rest of us, whole into its insatiable maw.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—On Wednesday, 1 June, the Army Personnel Records Board passed into history after completing one of the most extensive studies ever made on the records of the officers of the Regular Army. After almost two years of painstaking research involving several tons of data, there is today on file for each of the approximately 22,500 Regular Army Officers, male and female, an easily digestible and comprehensive brief covering his entire military career.

50 Years Ago—We notice in Service magazines remarks of members of one branch of the Service respecting another that not only are in bad taste, but depart from the time-honored desire of the War Department that one arm should not reflect upon another.

95 Years Ago—General Sherman continues his vigorous march into Georgia, meeting with scarcely a show of opposition from Johnston, who would appear to have hardly strength sufficient in his heterogeneous army of conscripts and militia to even embarrass the march of our victorious columns.

Paris-Bound Aero Commander Christened "Le Tapis Magigve" By Madame Max Gelee

THE Aero Commander which Miss Jerrie Cobb will fly from Boston to Paris for the Paris Air Show was christened "Le Tapis Magigve"—"The Magic Carpet"—by Madame Max Gelee, wife of General Gelee, FAF, French Representative on the NATO Standing Group, in ceremonies at Washington National Airport 29 May.

In the photo above are: General Gelee, Madame Gelee making a clean hit with a bottle of French champagne, and Miss Cobb, daughter of Lt. Col. William Harvey Cobb, USAF-Ret., of Oklahoma City.

Miss Cobb set a class World Speed Record in an Aero Commander at Las Vegas in connection with the World Congress of Flight (see THE JOURNAL 18 April, page 26.)

Many representatives of the French Embassy were present for the ceremony, including Major General Bezy, the Air Attache, and M. Lescuyer, the Commercial Attache.

Flying to Paris with Miss Cobb will be J. C. Watson, Service Manager for the Aero Design & Engineering Company, manufacturers of the Aero Commander, and Miss Cecile L. Hamilton, managing editor of Flying Magazine.

Joining them in Paris for the Air Show will be George Pew, president of Aero Design & Engineering Company; Ted Smith, vice president; Gene Charles, sales manager; Tom Sim, export sales manager, and Clarence Morgan, pilot, who will be the flying demonstrations in Europe.

Mr. Watson pointed out that the flight is not unusual. "About one fourth of our sales are exports," he said, "and they are all flown over."

Threat Of General War Deters Limited Conflict; Services Need Ready Forces

Those who believe that the threat of mass-annihilation will prevent all-out war are now assured by the House Appropriations Committee that the same reasoning deters limited war.

In a discussion of limited vs. general war in its report on the fiscal '60 military budget, the Committee said the "ever present threat" that a single incident could start a general war "acts as a real deterrent to any aggressive military adventures by the Communist bloc."

But, the Committee told the Defense Department, the Armed Forces should, nevertheless, maintain the capability of coping quickly with limited war, just in case. This capability, the Committee said, will be "an additional assurance against a small affair growing into a much larger one."

The Appropriations group said "It is not so much a matter of mobilizing immediately available manpower to handle a limited war as it is the capability of the necessary manpower to get quickly to the spot, adequately equipped and supported."

Quoting from the testimony by General Maxwell D. Taylor, the Committee said the retiring Army Chief of Staff "made it clear that the major problems in this regard arise from inadequate

Pro-Pay "Lack Of Uniformity" Criticized; Committee OK's $45 Million For 163,424

A warning has been sounded by the House Appropriations Committee that enlisted proficiency pay should not be allowed to degenerate into "just another part of the permanent pay of individual military personnel."

Approving $45 million for pro-pay for 163,424 men in fiscal '60, the Committee criticized the Services for "lack of uniformity" in administering "standards and controls over this program."

The approach taken by the Marine Corps, however, was lauded. The Committee said it was impressed by the manner in which the Marines have implemented the program.

Pro-pay funds approved for the new fiscal year include $16.3 million for 57,000 soldiers, $14.5 million for 52,266 airmen, $10.9 million for 41,558 sailors and $3.7 million for 12,000 Marines.

The Committee said it "feels that uniform standards and controls should be developed, insofar as varying Service conditions will permit, and that the utmost care be used to insure that this program does not grow out of proportion to its purpose."

Walter Reed Will Get Nuclear Reactor

A 5000-watt nuclear reactor for biological research and medical treatment will be installed in the summer of 1960 at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Washington, D. C.

The 450-ton reactor, designed by Atomic International, a division of North American Aviation, will be the largest available for treatment of hospital patients.

Notes On Free World Fighting Forces

One of the first Japanese technical publications on space medicine has been dedicated to Dr. Hubertus Strughold, Professor of Space Medicine and Advisor for Research at the School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph AFB, Tex. Titled "Medicine and the Stars," (English translation) the book covers much of the pioneer research work that Dr. Strughold and his colleagues began at the School in 1947. It was compiled and edited by Maj. Gen. Yasuo Omura, Col. Mizuo Kawamata, and Col. Masamitsu Oshima of the Japan Air Self Defense Force. Colonel Oshima is a graduate of the School's Primary Course in Aviation Medicine. General Omura and Colonel Kawamata have both visited the School.

The Federal Republic of Germany in the licensed manufacture of General Electric's J79 turbojet engine for the Lockheed F-104 will have the assistance of a GE Resident Managing Engineer, John W. Bergman. He will have over-all responsibility for management and coordination of the General Electric technical assistance support program there. The program will provide manufacturing, assembly and test support to the licensee building J79 powerplants for the Starfighters to be manufactured abroad for the West Germany Air Force.

General Electric's Flight Propulsion Division will furnish engines for the first 96 of nearly 300 Starfighters to be built. The remaining engines will be produced in the Federal Republic of Germany under license with General Electric.

Mr. Bergman and his wife, the former Eleanor Johnson of North Easton, Massachusetts, have three children and reside at 8851 Hound Hill Road, Cincinnati. They plan to move to Munich, Germany this fall.

Two Viet Nam Air Force non-commissioned officers, TSgt. Co. Nguyen Thanh and TSgt. Kim, Ngo Van are at Osan AB, Korea, for a 14 week aircraft frame repair training course. They are the first representatives of their country to be schooled by the USAF in Korea.

General Taylor listed a five-point program which he said is necessary to meet the possible challenges posed by future limited war situations. He asked for:

- Modernization of military equipment applicable to limited war situations.
- Improved strategic mobility of limited war forces.
- Pre-planned use of air and sealift necessary to move these forces.
- An expanded program for joint planning and training of the elements of limited war forces, and

General Decker Greets Royal Navy Visitor

RADM. V. C. Begg, Royal Navy Far East Station Second-in-Command, is shown here with General George H. Decker, USA, during a recent visit at Eighth Army Headquarters, Seoul, Korea. General Decker, who is CinC United Nations Command, U. S. Forces Korea, and Eighth Army CG, has been named Army Vice CofS to succeed General Lyman L. Lemnitzer, USA, when the latter replaces General Maxwell D. Taylor, USA, who retires at the end of June.

Brigadier Karmin Ohan, Director of Training of the Jordan Arab Army, left Ft. Benning, Ga., 30 May, after three days of touring Infantry Center facilities.

Brigadier T. Graeme Gibson, Commander of the Canadian Army Staff, Washington, D. C., addressed 104 graduating Ranger students of the Army Infantry School this week at Ft. Benning, Ga.

RYUKYU CofS

Col. William J. Daniel has been named Army Ryukyu Islands/IX Corps CofS, replacing Col. John T. Herrod, who has returned to the U. S. for reassignment.

Colonel Daniel, USMA '33, who has previously served as USARYIS Inspector General, has been on Okinawa since December 1957.

Married since 1936, Col. and Mrs. Daniel have one son, Richard, 20, and a daughter, Diane, 6.

THE USUAL UNANIMITY OF BOARDS OF VISITORS to the Service Academies has been broken. A member of the USMA Board of Visitors, Representative Stuyvesant Wainwright (R-NY), an Army Reserve lieutenant colonel and paratrooper, has taken the position that the present status of the Boards makes them, in effect, a "rubber stamp group" for the Superintendents.

QUERIED BY THE JOURNAL as to whether he had communicated his views to the White House, Representative Wainwright acknowledged that he has written the President about the matter. What he proposes is that the Boards of Visitors be replaced by groups that would act in a capacity more like Boards of Trustees or Overseers at civilian universities.

THE WEST POINT GRADUATION could be followed quickly by announcement of new general officer assignments. Its Superintendent, Lt. Gen. Garrison H. Davidson—the only Academy Superintendent to hold three-star rank—is due for a new assignment. Many in the Army see him as a possible future CofS. They note that he lacks Pentagon service, and speculate that General Davidson may be designated to succeed NATO-bound Lt. Gen. James E. Moore as Deputy CofS for Military Operations. Most often, that post has gone to an officer returning from duty overseas. Two other three-star billets remained to be filled this week—a successor for Korea-bound Lt. Gen. Carter B. Magruder as Deputy CofS for Logistics, and a successor for Sixth Army Commander, Lt. Gen. Charles D. Palmer, who will succeed his brother, General Williston B. Palmer as Deputy CinC of the U. S. European Command. Seen certain to figure in the forthcoming three-star shifts is Lt. Gen. Thomas J. H. Trapnell, I Corps Commander in Korea.

USAF ACADEMY CADETS cannot promise their fiancées a chapel wedding at the Colorado Springs site before May '61. Bids for the Cadet Chapel were opened in February, but all proved too costly. New bids are to be opened 12 June, with construction scheduled to start in August. Until the Chapel is completed, Protestant weddings at the Academy will continue to be held at the residence of the Superintendent.

ALTHOUGH HE WON A THUNDEROUS OVATION at 3 June graduation ceremonies, the bottom man in the USAFA '59 class, unlike the West Point "goat" and Annapolis "anchor man," has no official designation. Journal Editor-Publisher LeRoy Whitman, covering the historic ceremonies, asked some of the new lieutenants about the problem. They said that there were some who favored, "Tail End Charlie," while others supported "Blue 4." The issue remains to be resolved. 2d Lt. Keith Barnard, USAFA '59, as the "Tail End Charlie" or "Blue 4" was the bottom man who received the top salute from the graduation crowd.

COL. MAX BOYD, a former Associated Press reporter, who has guided the Information Services program at the USAF Academy for more than four years, will be succeeded by Col. Robert F. Good, who has directed the AF's Internal Information program under Maj. Gen. Arno Luehman at the Pentagon.

THE OVERWHELMING VOTE, 131-43 in the House of Representatives against a mandatory 900,000-man floor for Army fiscal '60 strength is certain to doom chances for such a provision to be written into the Appropriations Act. The final language, however, undoubtedly will call upon the Administration to maintain such a strength. It's noteworthy that the House decided to drop mandatory language on Army Reserve and National Guard strength, which is included in the fiscal '59 law.

THE ARMY WILL AWARD a contract this month for tooling and production of a new canisterless mask, developed by the Chemical Corps, for use by all Services. Designated the "M-17," the mask provides protection against chemical and biological agents and radiological particles. A lightweight filter material molded into the rubber face-piece eliminates the need of an external canister. The new mask is described as "the first significant change in mask evolution" since 1947.

CONGRESS ISN'T GETTING THE INFORMATION it needs to make "the kind of sagacious decisions expected of it" in the national defense area, according to an editorial in the current issue of the Air Force Association's Air Force Magazine. Editor John F. Loosbrock, urging that Congress consider establishment of a technical advisory group, declares that the defense team now is "made up of disparate elements each doing its own job." In a baseball analogy, the editorial comments that this "would be the kind of a team one would have if every man wanted to pitch, no one wanted to play right field, while the manager sat on his hands in the dugout."

IT'S A GOOD QUESTION how far Congress will go in telling the Services what kind of training they can provide military personnel. The House Appropriations Committee told the Air Force (Page 27) it must end 10-hour indoctrination training for selected colonels and general officers in supersonic fighters. Carried to an extreme, this approach could ban senior Army officers from learning how to maneuver new type vehicles.

THE FIRST ATOMIC PAY CUT IN THE SERVICES will be imposed upon Capt. Eugene P. Wilkinson, USN. He was the first skipper of the Nautilus, the world's first nuclear-powered ship. His brilliant command of the Nautilus has led to Captain Wilkinson's designation as the first skipper of the cruiser Long Beach, which will be the first nuclear-powered warship. As the Nautilus captain, he received $245 a month in submarine incentive pay. That goes overboard with his new nuclear command—a loss of $2,940 per year.

THE ARMOR BRANCH gets the top man in the USMA '59 class, 2d Lt. James L. Abrahamson. He had led his class in the General Order of Academic Merit for four years. In view of the fact that the Corps of Engineers frequently gets the top man, it's interesting to note that Lieutenant Abrahamson, among numerous other prizes, took the General William A. Mitchell Award for the highest rating in Military Engineering and Military History.

PENTAGON NEWSMEN HAD A PARTICULAR INTEREST in one of the awards made during the first June Week at the USAF Academy. It was the Brig. Gen. A. Robert Ginsburgh Award, which went to Cadet Michael P. C. Carns, editor of the cadet yearbook, "Polaris." General Ginsburgh, a former Army and Air Force public information officer and artillery commander, was a member of the Pentagon press corps as Military Editor, of U. S. News & World Report following his retirement. He lost his life in a B-52 crash at Westover AFB, Mass., while on a news assignment.

AN AIR FORCE AUXILIARY CHAPLAIN, Rev. Wilford V. Presson of La Habra, Calif., needs nautical help to serve men of the 670th Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron. They are stationed on San Clemente Island, 60 miles off the California coast. Chaplain Presson boards a Navy ship every Monday afternoon at Long Beach to visit the AF islanders.

THE NAVY HAS ORDERED Cdr. Paul S. Sanders, ChC, a Methodist Ready Reserve Chaplain, to two months' active duty beginning 19 June to complete Volume VI of the "History of the Navy Chaplain Corps," covering the Korean War. He has been working on this for the past four years while on summer training duty. The first five volumes were written by Chaplain C. M. Drury, USNR-Ret. Chaplain Sanders is a faculty member at the Vanderbilt University Divinity School.

THE ARMY AIR DEFENSE COMMAND in the 12 months beginning 1 July will move more than 10,000 soldiers in a redistribution of technical strength. It's a result of the continuing shift from Nike Ajax to Nike Hercules and the assignment of missile units to new city areas and SAC bases. The shuffle will be curtailed, of course, if Congress slashes Hercules deployment plans.

LT. GEN. THOMAS F. HICKEY, USA-Ret., former Third Army Commander at Ft. McPherson, Ga., has been recalled to active duty for a special JCS assignment. Last week, he returned to McPherson to join in retirement ceremonies for his brother, Col. James E. Hickey. Colonel and Mrs. Hickey and their children, Rita, 17, and James E., Jr., 15, plan to reside in the Atlanta area.

ACADEMIC CYNICS who sometimes wonder about the value of a Ph.D. can be informed that the Army has decided to make it count in some promotions. Announcing criteria for new selections to temporary captain (see Page 13), the Army has set two different cut-off dates for Medical Service Corps officers, depending on whether or not they hold doctorate degrees.

SERVICE PERSONNEL OFFICERS frequently are accused of promulgating policies in language that is difficult to understand. This fact makes pertinent an article by Lt. Col. John L. Gates, a G-1 type at Fourth Army Headquarters, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., prepared for the May issue of The Toastmaster, official magazine of Toastmasters International. His subject: "Syncretistic Words." A Ft. Sam press release notes: "Syncretistic words are certain collective or inclusive words which are too general to be meaningful and are oftentimes pointless." The author states that they "must be used carefully."

T-BIRDS TO TEES is the swing of Lt. C. Hillman Robbins, jr., Ninth AF Air Operations Center at Shaw AFB, S. C. He leaves active duty this month to take up a career as a professional golfer. Among his past tournament victories: National Intercollegiate, 1954; National Amateur, 1957; All-Air Force, 1956; and All-Service, 1957.

THE ARMY MAP SERVICE, which has 3,700 military and civilian personnel, gets a new Chief, Col. Robert R. Robertson, effective 15 July. He will succeed Col. Frederick O. Diercks, who takes command of the 159th Engineer Group (Construction) at Ft. Bragg, N. C. Colonel Robertson has been Chief of the Corps of Engineers Technical Liaison Office in Washington.

FEW MILITARY OFFICERS HAVE A MORE INTRIGUING off-duty task than Lt. Franklin Johnson, a pilot in the 3537th Navigator Training Squadron at Mather AFB, Calif. He has been commissioned by the American Guild of Organists to write a ballet. It will be presented 16 June by the Sacramento Ballet Guild, with Mrs. Johnson, a piano teacher, playing her husband's music.

Maj. Eliasson Will Get McClellan Award

Maj. Arne H. Eliasson, Chief of Seventh Army Aviation Safety, Stuttgart, Germany, will receive the James H. McClellan Memorial Safety Award 6 June in Washington.

Senator John L. McClellan (D-Ark.) will present the award, offered in memory of his son, James H. McClellan, a former Army aviator who died in a flying accident in 1958, at the first annual meeting of the Army Aviation Association of America.

Major Eliasson, who has devoted almost two years to raising Seventh Army aviation safety standards to an all-time high, topped a field of nominees that included both Army and civilian safety experts.

He was nominated by Col. Edgar C. Wood, Seventh Army Aviation Officer. "For calendar year 1958," Colonel Wood said, "Seventh Army's aircraft accident rate was 38.1 (number of accidents per 100,000 hours flying time) compared with a world-wide average of 59.1."

"Thus far in 1959 the accident rate in Seventh Army is approximately 17.0."

Major Eliasson will report in July to the Command and General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., then go to Ft. Rucker, Ala. to join the Army Human Research Unit.

FIELD SOLDIER'S NEEDS ARE STRESSED

CRITICIZING the Army's research and development programs, the House Appropriations Committee said Army R&D efforts "have not produced needed weapons and other items for use of ground troops in a satisfactory manner."

"Great strides have been made in recent years in developing new air and sea weapons, such as ballistic missiles and nuclear powered submarines but the weapons which have been evolved for the use of the ground soldier have been much less spectacular."

The Committee said "the same industry and effort which enabled the Army to develop the Jupiter IRBM should be applied to the less glamorous weapons required by the field soldiers."

The Army budget, as approved by the Committee, includes $124.4 million for development of new air transportable armored personnel carriers, a new light truck family, improved armament for tanks, the Davy Crockett system, the Little John free rocket and its atomic warhead, new artillery weapons and improvements in conventional ammunition.

Army-Marines Test Four New Carriers

Four experimental XM443E1 cargo-personnel carriers developed by Willys Motors, Inc., in conjunction with the Army Ordnance Corps, have been delivered to the Armed Forces for evaluation.

The new lightweight tactical carrier, made largely of aluminum, is a platform-type vehicle as is the M274 Mechanical Mule being manufactured by Willys for the Army and Marine Corps.

It has six seats, four of which fold into the platform to convert the vehicle quickly from a personnel carrier to a truck. The vehicle is powered by a 100-horsepower, air-cooled, aluminum engine developed by Willys. The engine is mounted under the platform.

The Army has one of the XM443E1 units at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, and another at Ft. Knox, Ky., while the Marine Corps has two at Quantico, Va. A fifth unit will be delivered soon to the Ordnance Tank-Automotive Command at Detroit.

Since World War II, Willys Motors has been designated by the Department of Defense as the mobilization source for lightweight tactical vehicles. The company has produced more than 504,000 "Jeep" vehicles for the U. S. Armed Forces and thousands more for military forces of other countries in the free world.

Iconorama Displayed In Pentagon War Room; NORAD Installation Set

Top military commanders at the Pentagon, including General Curtis E. LeMay, USAF Vice CofS, have been given a demonstration during the past week of Iconorama two and three-dimension plotter displays.

Designed and built by Fenske, Fedrick, and Miller, Inc., of Los Angeles, a subsidiary of Temco, Dallas, the Iconorama system is being installed at North American Air Defense Command Headquarters at Ent AFB, Colo.

At Ent, it is likely to mean the "retirement" of the slack-clad WAF who man the mommonth plotting board.

An Iconorama installation also is slated for SAC Headquarters at Offutt AFB, Nebr.

The Army Signal Corps and Marine Corps aviation officials also are evaluating the system, which has been in operation at the Cape Canaveral, Fla., White Sands, N. M., and Point Mugu, Calif., missile test centers. The Naval Research Laboratory in Washington, D. C., also is using the new system.

The Iconorama—its name comes from the Greek words "icon" (image) and "orama" (view)—as demonstrated in Washington by Mr. Dick LaCroix at a press presentation arranged by Brig. Gen. Luther S. Smith, USAF-Ret., Temco Assistant to the President and Director of Public Relations, permits preparation of large scale multiple color plots with a single integrated instrument.

An array of Iconorama projectors provides a coordinated, composite display consisting of individual images on a single viewing screen.

Basic element is a precisely built miniature recording mechanism that scribes a projectible record on a glass slide which has been coated with an opaque material. The plotting mechanism and slide, located at the image plane of a projection lens system, are illuminated by a light source. This makes it possible to project the image of the scribed trace onto a screen in greatly enlarged form.

New Book Studies Generals-Statesmen

"Generals As Statesmen," by Josef Egmond Gellermann, published by the Vintage Press; 150 pages; price $2.95.

TODAY, as throughout history, distinguished military leaders have been called upon to take the role of statesmen. How have their training and experience as generals fitted them for the craft of statesmanship?

It was to analyze an study this question that Dr. Gellermann undertook years of research into the lives of such men and to prepare this concise and interesting volume.

Opening with a chapter on generalship, the book follows with eight penetrating chapters on generals close to our times, men whose military leadership and whose part in politics have had great impact and influence on today's history. Included are: Petain, Mannerheim, Schleicher, Grant, MacArthur, De Gaulle, Hindenburg, and Ludendorff. Each reacted differently to the demands of statesmanship. The author points up his illuminating study with little-known—but significant—episodes about the men.

Dr. Gellermann was a noted educator and student of world affairs, who had the added advantage of extensive military training and service prior to World War II, where he served in Intelligence and Counter-Intelligence assignments in Australia, British New Guinea, the Netherlands East Indies, the Philippine Islands, and Japan. At the time of his death in 1956, he held the rank of Major in the U. S. Army Reserves in the 352d Military Government Detachment.

Dr. Gellermann's death cut short the plans he had for further illustrative biographies in this field. He had planned to cover the careers of Chiang Kai-shek, Francisco Franco, Kemal Ataturk, Georgi Zhukov, Josip Broz Tito, Juan Domingo Peron, Karl Haushofer, Hermann Goering, George C. Marshall, William D. Leahy, and Dwight D. Eisenhower.

A reading of the present volume is a rewarding experience and leads one to regret that he did not live to complete his full original plans.

Aero-Space Power Room Is Opened

THE Aero-Space Power Room in the U. S. Air Force Academy Library has been officially opened by Brig. Gen. Henry R. Sullivan, jr., Commandant of Cadets. Present at the ceremony were (left to right) Cadet J. C. Vance, Acting Chairman of the Cadet Professional Studies Group; Capt Donald R. Showen, Officer-in-Charge of the Aero-Space Power Room; General Sullivan; and Mr. Norman J. Ritter, Academy Audio-Visual Services, who designed the layout.

The Aero-Space Power Room will provide the cadets a single location where current technical and scientific information in aeronautical and space fields will be available to them. All aircraft models and periodicals were supplied by Air Force commands and the aircraft industry. The room will also be used as the editorial offices for a cadet professional newspaper which will be published for the first time on 15 June.

The concept of the Aero-Space Power Room was conceived by the cadets of the Professional Studies Group. This is an extracurricular cadet activity designed to tie together all cadet airmanship instruction, to keep them abreast of aero-space developments both within and outside the Air Force. The activity is directed by Lt. Col. Louis J. Churchill, Chief of the Airpower Division, Department of Military Studies.

M/G Bryan Receives Posthumous Honor; Ten Others Decorated At Wright-Patterson

An Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit has been awarded posthumously to Maj. Gen. Thomas L. Bryan, jr., former Commander of the Wright Air Development Center, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

The decoration was presented to General Bryan's widow by Maj. Gen. Stanley T. Wray, WADC Commander, during a bi-annual inspection and review of WADC officers and airmen at Wright-Patterson. Mrs. Bryan's 10-year-old son, Thomas Paul, accepted the medal from the WADC Commander.

General Bryan commanded WADC from August 1955 to September 1957. He died 22 July 1958, at the USAF Hospital, Wright-Patterson, following an 11-month illness.

Ten other decorations were presented during the review to six WADC and three Air Research and Development Command officers.

The DFC was presented to Maj. Lewis E. Kesterson and Maj. Charles E. Fitzwater of WADC's Directorate of Flight and All-Weather Testing.

The Air Medal and an oak leaf cluster were presented to Lt. Col. John B. Armstrong of WADC's Aircraft Laboratory. Capt. Joseph S. Schiele of WADC's Directorate of Flight and All-Weather Testing also received the Air Medal.

The Air Force Commendation Ribbon was awarded to Lt. Col. Edward B. Reed of WADC's Directorate of Procurement, and Lt. John P. Henderson of WADC's Aeronautical Accessories Laboratory.

Three officers assigned to ARDC's Directorate of Systems Management were also decorated with the Commendation ribbon. They were: Lt. Col. R. G. Bounds, jr., Maj. Fletcher S. Porter, and Capt. Malcom O. Colby.

General Bryan was cited for the "exceptional manner" in which he directed the Center's research and development program to meet Air Force air and space flight objectives.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

Committee Reverses Pentagon Refusal To Grant Nike-Zeus Procurement Funds

Defense Department efforts to delay Army procurement plans for the Nike-Zeus suffered a sharp set-back when the Appropriations Committee voted a $200 million budget increase to accelerate the program and to speed Army modernization.

The Committee said: "If this country is to have an adequate defense against the intercontinental ballistic missile, it must be made available as promptly as possible."

The Army funds had been denied by Secretary of Defense McElroy. He said he was acting on the advice of his top scientific advisors. The late Deputy Secretary of Defense Donald A. Quarles told the Congressional group, however, that there was divided scientific opinion on the subject (JOURNAL Memo, 30 May).

An unspecified part of the Army increase is to be used to modernize Army equipment. The Committee said it "does not believe that the budget makes adequate provision for equipping the Army with the firepower weapons it has finally developed, particularly the new rifle, machine gun, and Davy Crockett weapon."

Noting that the Army reported a "miscalculation" of procurement needs, amounting to $217 million, the Committee said if such a mistake has been made, "a supplemental budget estimate should be presented to Congress to cover the shortage. The Committee does not intend that any of the funds provided above the budget estimates for Nike-Zeus, firepower modernization, or the Reserve forces, be used to make up this shortage."

New Research Director

RICHARD S. MORSE, the Army's new Director of Research and Development, is sworn in by Maj. Gen. Bruce Easley, Deputy Adjutant General. Mr. Morse, Founder and President of the National Research Corporation at Cambridge, Mass., succeeds Dr. William H. Martin.

Hughes Official Gets Pentagon R&E Post

Dr. Herbert F. York, Director of Research and Engineering, Department of Defense, has announced Defense Department appointment of John H. Rubel as Assistant Director of Defense Research and Engineering (strategic weapons). Mr. Rubel, 39, has been granted a leave of absence from Hughes Aircraft Company of Culver City, Calif., where he has been Director of Airborne Systems Laboratories.

An electrical engineering graduate of California Institute of Technology, he has 16 years' experience in the electronics industry. In 1946 he joined the Hughes company where he contributed to work on automatic celestial navigation, the Falcon series of air-to-air guided missiles and the airborne armament control systems used in Air Force all-weather jet interceptors.

Navy Demonstrates New Mark IV Space Suit; Already Used By Crusader Pilots

THE Mark IV space suit, developed by B. F. Goodrich and the Navy, was demonstrated 2 June to newsmen visiting the Air Crew Equipment Laboratory at the U. S. Naval Air Material Center, Philadelphia.

Capt. R. A. Bosee, Director of the Laboratory, said that the suit, a result of more than 10 years' development work, has been adopted by the Navy for operational use in aircraft above 45,000 feet and is at present being used by squadrons flying the Chance Vought F8U Crusader.

It is also being used in flight evaluations of the McDonnell F4H, and is being pointed for use in the North American A3J Vigilante, and as yet untested orbital vehicles, Captain Bosee revealed.

The suit is remarkably flexible as demonstrated by a wearer who played baseball to show his freedom of action (see picture). It weighs only 20 pounds and looks more like a conventional flying suit than some of its predecessors. Yet it is capable of providing artificially pressurized environment so that even in a vacuum (recently estimated to begin at about 600 miles out in space) a pilot would be as comfortable and operational as he is now at 35,000 feet.

RAdm. Sharp In Research Slot

RAdm. Raymond Sharp, Commander, Carrier Division 15, prior to reporting to the Office of the CNO in February, has been assigned as Senior Navy Member, Military Studies and Liaison Division, Office of Director of Defense Research and Engineering.

He relieved RAdm. Andrew M. Jackson for whom a new post has not yet been announced.

Newsmen were shown demonstrations of men wearing the suit in a swimming pool, in below freezing brine, in an ejection seat tower test, and in an explosive decompression test.

Anti-Submarine Warfare Programs Win Big Boost; Two Ships Are Added

A big boost in spending for the Navy's anti-submarine warfare program has been voted by the House Appropriations Committee.

The Committee added $255.3 million to the ASW program to "provide for additional and sorely needed effort in the research and development field; for essential ammunition and fire control equipment including missiles, mines and torpedoes; as well as for additional anti-submarine warfare aircraft and helicopters."

Two new ships also were authorized for construction with the added funds: a guided missile destroyer and an additional nuclear-powered submarine with primary anti-submarine capability.

The Committee said the "growing Soviet submarine fleet is an unprecedented threat to our control of the seas. It can not be minimized. It must be contained if there is to be assurance that the sealines of communication are to be available, in the event of war."

An "even greater concern," the Committee said, "is the threat of surprise attack from missile firing submarines lying hidden off our coasts."

Citing Admiral Arleigh A. Burke's testimony before the Committee, the group said the submarine has progressed faster than ASW capabilities, which fact, when taken together with the number of Soviet submarines, "constitutes a shocking and dangerous situation."

The Committee said funds requested for ASW will not "provide for the progress needed to increase our capability in this area. A major effort is required."

In pursuit of this objective, the Committee added $97.2 million to the shipbuilding program, $69.6 million to the Navy procurement program, $45 million to Navy R&D, $39 million to aircraft and related procurement, and $4.5 million to Navy operation and maintenance funds.

The boost in aircraft procurement will provide 20 additional Sikorsky HSS-3 helicopters and 18 additional Grumman S2F-3 anti-submarine aircraft.

Billion Approved For AF Electronics

THE House Appropriations Committee has approved $1.1 billion to support Air Force electronics and tele-communication programs as well as those required for essential organizational and base equipment.

The Committee said the approved funds are sufficient to provide for "continued procurement in support of the ballistic missile early warning system, continental air defense and other essential electronic and tele-communication programs."

A reduction of $50 million in the Air Force radar improvement program was ordered.

The Committee said it has no objection to Air Force plans to replace existing radars with improved equipment that has a longer range capability but "it is apparent that the procurement of the improved radars can be phased over a longer period of time to allow for the maximum implementation of technical improvements occurring in this field."

Atlas And Minuteman Get Big Increase; Bomarc And Mace Programs Are Cut

Two Air Force missile programs—Bomarc and Mace—will be sharply reduced, and two others—Atlas and Minuteman—will be upgraded, if the House and Senate uphold action by the House Appropriations Committee.

Criticizing the "competing systems" for defense against aircraft, the Committee cut $162.7 million from the Boeing Bomarc program, noting that although the first Bomarc was test fired in 1952, "still none are in operational units."

The Committee said it would be willing to vote the full budget request for Bomarc if it had "the assurance that the system would actually work."

A slightly smaller amount, $127.5 million, was eliminated for procurement of the Martin Mace ground-launched tactical missile.

The Committee noted that the Navy-cancelled Chance Vought Regulus II, which had "more desirable operational characteristics" than the Mace, has been eliminated as "no longer required," and said it believes existing weapons systems available to the Armed Forces are sufficient to meet the operational requirements envisaged for Mace.

The Committee added a total of $162 million to the Air Force budget to accelerate the Convair Atlas and Minuteman programs.

The $85 million provided for Atlas is a "down payment," the Committee said, "on eight additional squadrons which will require substantial additional sums in subsequent years."

To implement the Atlas program fully, the Committee said an additional $135 million also should be made available for military construction, and hinted that it would appropriate the funds if the Armed Services Committee would authorize the expanded program.

The $87 million extra which the Committee provided for the Minuteman program is designed, together with the Atlas funds, "to improve our ICBM capability above and beyond actions proposed in the budget," the group said.

The Committee said it "feels that a missile gap exists and does not wish to see it widened."

Arthur Link Named Consul To Garrett Corporation

Arthur Link, formerly in charge of Western Electric Company's multi-million dollar guided missile program, has joined The Garrett Corporation, Los Angeles, as a consultant. Lt. Gen. K. B. Wolfe, USAF-Ret., Executive Vice President, said Mr. Link will be a member of Garrett's corporate research group and corporate policy group, advising on missile and electronics projects.

With Western Electric, he managed the Nike missile program, including the negotiating and executing of contracts for the Nike, Nike Ajax, Nike Hercules, and the Zeus. In that position he coordinated production of the entire weapons system.

Army Missile Scientist Advises Engineer Chief

Dr. Gilford G. Quarles has been appointed Chief Scientific Adviser to Maj. Gen. E. C. Itschner, Chief of Army Engineers.

Dr. Quarles, 49, since 1958 has been Chief Scientist, Army Ordnance Missile Command, Redstone Arsenal, Ala. From 1956 to 1958 he was Scientific and Technical Consultant in the same office.

From 1944 to 1956 he was associated with the Harvard Underwater Sound Laboratory and the Ordnance Research Laboratory at Pennsylvania State University, engaged in research and development work in underwater ordnance.

Navy Aircraft Program Too Diverse, Committee Charges; Urges Fewer Planes

THE Navy has been told to review its aircraft procurement program and try to settle on fewer planes in more economical numbers.

"Concerned" about the Navy's fiscal '60 plans to purchase "numerous types of aircraft in small numbers," the House Appropriations Committee has called for a "close analysis" of the program with the objective of procuring "fewer types of aircraft and in such quantities as would provide the most economical cost to the Government."

Although critical of the Navy procurement program, the Committee granted $1.9 billion in aircraft and related procurement funds. This is $19.1 million more than the Administration requested, but includes increases recommended by the Committee for ASW planes and helicopters and a cut of $19.9 million as part of an overall procurement reduction applied across-the-board to all of the Services.

Funds recommended by the Committee will provide for approximately 700 new Naval aircraft, including twin jet-engine attack and close support planes, jet all-weather carrier based fighters (including the new F4H helicopters for the Marine Corps), modern training planes, and Marine Corps transports.

L/G Irvine, USAF-Ret. Avco V.P.

Lt. Gen. Clarence S. Irvine, USAF-Ret., has joined Avco Corporation as Vice President and Director of Planning.

A noted authority on development of weapons systems and on production, he was Air Force Deputy CofS, Materiel before retirement 30 April.

He was commissioned a Second Lieutenant in 1921 and participated that year in bombing tests which General Billy Mitchell conducted against World War I battleships. As a gunnery expert, he flew in such early aviation motion picture epics as "Wings" and "Hell's Angels."

During WW II, General Irvine held key assignments in engineering, inspection, industrial planning, and production control. He was an early proponent of the development of the four-engine bomber production program and was deeply involved in the development of the B-29 Superfortresses. He had responsibility for providing materials and production facilities for the first atomic bomb carriers.

He planned air lift support over the "hump" and B-29 bases in the Pacific. In 1944, he became Deputy CofS of the 21st Bomber Command of B-29's.

He joined SAC as Deputy CofS in 1947 and planned and established several long-range record flights. His best known flight was in the "Pacusan Dreamboat" from Honolulu to Cairo non-stop in 39 hours.

During the Korean war he commanded the 509th Bomber Wing, the first atomic bomb wing; the 19th Air Division of B-36 Bombers, and the 8th Air Force. From this latter command he moved up to the post of Deputy Commander of the Air Materiel Command for production and weapons systems.

Douglas Liaison Unit Activated At SAC Hdqs

Douglas Aircraft Company has established a liaison office at SAC Headquarters, Offutt AFB, Neb.

President Donald W. Douglas, Jr., said that the company representative will be Mr. George Lind, who has worked closely with SAC as a member of the company's general office Weapon Systems organization.

His function will include the necessary coordination with SAC in the development of an air to surface missile.

Douglas was recently awarded a new air launched ballistic missile (ALBM) study contract.

For the past three years, Mr. Lind has been involved in the study of system requirements for combat aircraft and missiles for the Air Force, Navy and Army. He has been closely associated with the company's ALBM project since the inception of the program.

He began his Douglas career in 1953 in advanced design engineering at the Long Beach Division. Prior to joining Douglas, he served as an Air Force aeronautical engineer at the Wright Air Development Center in Dayton.

L/C Deane DeFord Of AF Joins Radiation Inc.

Lt. Col. Deane C. DeFord has joined Radiation, Inc., Melbourne, Fla., and will be assigned to the office of Vice President and Assistant General Manager L. P. Clark.

Colonel DeFord, retiring after 17 years service in the Air Force, was communications, electronics and instrumentation officer for the drone aircraft group at the first three atomic bomb tests; worked on the first take off and landing of a drone aircraft under radio control; participated in the test of the first heat seeking bomb (Felix B-6); took part in the original pilotless aircraft test using direct reading telemetry, and worked on the initial program of guided missiles suitability at Eglin AFB, Fla. He was Chief of the Guided Missile Maintenance Branch of the 3205th Drone Group at Eglin from 1955 to 1959. He was at the Pentagon from 1951 to 1955 as the Chief of Radar Target Intelligence Branch. Colonel DeFord served as electronics officer of the first experimental guided missile group from 1946 to 1951.

Senior Officers Will Lose Chance To Take Indoctrination In F-100 And F-102

The Air Force has been told by the House Appropriations Committee to abandon plans for "senior officer indoctrination courses."

The courses provide selected colonels and generals approximately 10 hours flying time in such aircraft as the North American F-100 and Convair F-102.

The Committee said "It is highly improbable that such officers would be called upon to pilot these craft in time of emergency, and if such were to be the case, 10 hours is a totally inadequate training time."

"The possible argument that these officers need, in addition to their experience and flying capability, to be tutored in the aircraft that their subordinates will fly is not regarded as tenable."

The Committee denied funds for the program initiated during the current fiscal year and for which the Air Force had planned to provide training for five senior staff officers each month during fiscal '60.

The courses are operated at Nellis AFB, Nev., and Tyndall AFB, Fla.

Northrop "Freedom Fighter" Is Unveiled

NORTHROP Corporation's new N-156F high-performance fighter plane, designed for air defense of free nations outside the U. S., was unveiled 30 May at Hawthorne, Calif., before an audience of more than 500 persons, including official representatives of more than 40 Free World countries.

Principal speaker at the roll-out ceremony was Maj. Gen. Jarred V. Crabb, Air Defense Command, CofS. President Thomas V. Jones of Northrop Corporation presided.

Mr. Jones termed the new plane, designated the "Freedom Fighter," a "symbol of real partnership with our free world allies."

"For the first time," he said, "our own Department of Defense has applied advance U. S. technology in a directed way to the military airpower problems which exist abroad. From the outset, it has been planned that this airplane will be built in the countries which will use it, and thus contribute to the economies of friendly nations outside the U. S. It is now clear that this plan will reduce the drain on the national resources of both the U. S. and its allies."

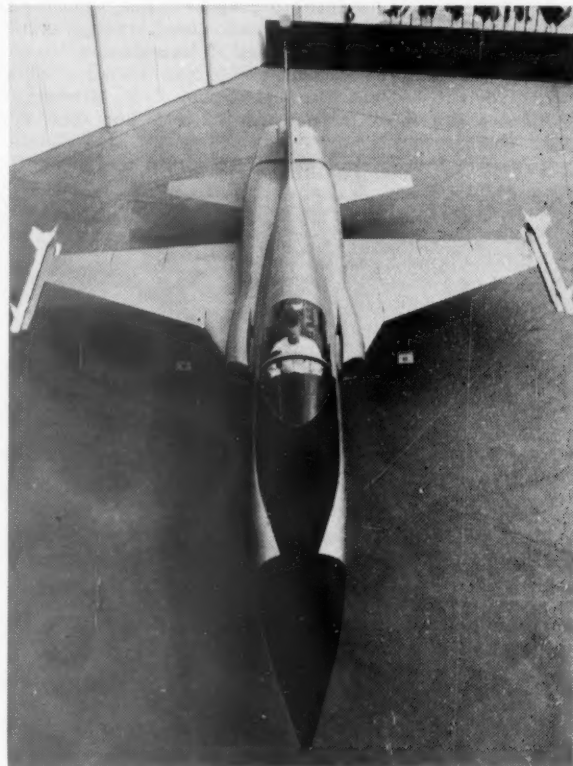

The Northrop engineers pointed out that the N-156F represents the first and only application of U. S. funds and technology to provide a high-performance, low-cost weapon system specifically tailored to the defense needs of America's Free World allies.

In addition, they said, the N-156F is the only American-developed fighter, designed in the ultra-modern high-performance, low-cost concept, which has actually reached the "hardware" stage.

The twin-engine configuration was chosen to provide increased safety because of the high accident rates in single-engine jet aircraft. This is in consonance with the recently-established U. S. military policy which provides that no more single-engine aircraft will be developed.

Early availability of the fighter is assured by its design similarity to the T-38 Talon supersonic trainer now in production for the Air Force. The T-38 and N-156F were developed in parallel, and the fighter makes extensive use of the designs, parts, tools and test experience used in the T-38 program.

Viewing the sleek, twin-engine jet fighter at the company's Norair Division here were some 50 military air attaches and other officers of allied governments, high Air Force officers, a press audience including some 40 foreign news correspondents, and key Northrop personnel involved in the N-156F program.

AF Will Buy 654 Aircraft; House Group Disapproves Funds For 39 Turbine Types

Aircraft procurement funds, totalling $243.4 million, were chopped from the fiscal '60 Air Force budget by the House Appropriations Committee.

Biggest single cut was $100 million for modifications to aircraft in the inventory.

Ten jet-prop cargo aircraft for use in the MATS fleet also were eliminated. They would have cost $53.5 million. The Committee said "Adequate transport capacity for this portion of the MATS mission exists in private commercial aircraft during the present cold war situation and in the Civil Reserve Air Fleet in the event of mobilization."

Also disapproved was $47.9 million for procurement of 15 jet utility trainers and 14 jet navigation trainers. The Committee said other aircraft "in inventory and under procurement are sufficient to meet any training requirements in this area."

Funds approved by the Committee — $4.1 billion — provide for continued procurement of strategic bombers and necessary supporting jet tankers, including 40 supersonic Convair B-58 bombers, 70 Boeing B-52 bombers, 96 Boeing KC-135 tanks and continued development of the North American B-70 chemical bomber, as well as necessary funds for tactical fighters, development work for a long-range supersonic interceptor, essential troop carrier transports, air-borne early warning and control aircraft, jet trainers and helicopters.

A total of 654 aircraft of all types was approved.

ATOMIC LAB

The Air Force's laboratory for testing atomic aircraft systems is reported in operation at Dawsonville, Ga., where more than 50 other governmental agencies are interested in using the facility to test effects of radiation on systems and components.

The Air Force and Lockheed Aircraft Corporation's Georgia Division said the main reactor at the Georgia Nuclear Laboratories (Air Force Plant No. 67) has been under testing for the past five months—with safety and success.

General Electric built the reactor.

First testing of aircraft systems and components in the nuclear environment is scheduled this month.

The Georgia Nuclear Laboratories is considered one of the most advanced facilities in the country for radiation effects testing and development work.

Army, Marines Urged To Keep Present Combat Units, Despite Manpower Cuts

FOR the second straight year, the House Appropriations Committee has refused to fight Administration cuts in the strength of the active Army and Marine Corps.

The Committee, reporting the fiscal '60 military budget, expressed "regret" that the Army and Marine Corps had been cut below the levels authorized by Congress, but took no action to enforce the Congressional stand.

The Committee said it is hopeful that both Services, by better utilization of their manpower, can prevent the reductions in combat units which are slated as a result of the manpower cutback.

The Committee said it "would be highly desirable" for the Army to support 15 full divisions instead of the 14 planned, and added that "greater efficiency and more realistic planning" might achieve this goal.

The Marine Corps was directed by the Committee "to make a careful analysis of its personnel resources" to see if it can retain six battalion landing teams which Marine leaders say will have to be eliminated under the cutback.

Whether the Committee action again will be overruled (as it was last year) was not known as THE JOURNAL went to press, but there are indications that both the House and Senate may vote mandatory "floors" for the two Services.

Airborne Alert Authority Granted

President Eisenhower has been given special authority to set up an airborne alert when and if he considers such a step necessary.

The authority, granted by the House Appropriations Committee, must be approved by the House and Senate before it becomes law.

It states in effect that the President is authorized to draw on special funds "to provide for the cost of an airborne alert," if he makes a determination "that such action is necessary."

The Committee said it "is pleased that the Air Force has undertaken exercises calculated to test and improve our airborne alert capabilities."

Although the Committee "feels that an airborne alert may be necessary as a means of protecting our Strategic Air Command forces and increasing our deterrent position," the group noted that such an operation would be "extremely costly in wear and tear on men and machines."

The Air Force has said it could establish a minimum air alert for about $360 million additional in operations and maintenance funds. Two bigger programs also have been considered. One would cost about $800 million and the other about $1.2 billion in extra O&M monies.

While not providing specific funds, the Committee added special language to the Appropriations bill "giving the President authority to incur a deficiency in Air Force funds at any time he feels it necessary to maintain an airborne alert."

Block Overseas Teacher Measure

The Defense Department's overseas teachers' bill has been blocked in the House by Representative Gerald R. Ford, Jr., ranking Republican on the Military Appropriations Subcommittee.

He said the Senate-passed measure might "unnecessarily" add to the cost of employing teachers for the children of military families overseas. In some respects, he said, the costs already are "too much." He added, "I am personally concerned about this program getting out of hand."

The legislation is estimated to cost a maximum of about $270,000 a year.

House supporters of the measure said it will enable the Defense Department to obtain "a higher class teacher for a very small amount of money." They explained that the per capita cost of educating children of military families and Defense Department employees overseas is about $252, compared with $434 in the District of Columbia.

Congressman Ford was not persuaded to change his mind. He obtained approval to have the bill "passed over without prejudice." He said he has "grave fears" about the program and wants to "take a further look" at it.

AIRBORNE...NEW USAF T-38 TALON!

The T-38 Talon fills a vital requirement of the Air Training Command. It is a lightweight, low-cost aircraft in which our new generation of space age airmen can safely master the art of supersonic flight.

Pioneering a new Northrop family of economical manned aircraft for the space age, the Talon is a direct result of teamwork between Norair and suppliers. This T-38 Team that made the trainer a reality is now producing it under USAF contract at Hawthorne, California. Soon to follow is the N-156F multi-purpose fighter, American-designed for our free-world allies.

The T-38 Talon stands as the latest airborne evidence of Norair capability and production know-how. Norair's creative management further adds to the accomplishment by trimming production costs with methods that include PACE — the unique Performance And Cost Evaluation program; new and superior quality controls; and Norair-conceived, years-ahead production techniques.
